

You're an educator. It's time New York paid you like one.

Whether you run a family child care program, teach in a center, or assist in a classroom, your work makes every other job in New York possible. Yet child care educators earn less than 96% of the state's workers, and home-based providers in NYC take home a median of $6.01 an hour. Together, we can change that in the 2027 state budget.

$1.8B

A wage scale for child care workers

Thriving wages for every provider in New York, in centers and in homes, without raising what families pay.

$1.2B

CCAP for every eligible family

Fully fund child care assistance so no family is waitlisted, your classroom stays full, and your payments are fair and on time.

What a wage scale means for you

- Pay like a public school teacher when you have the same credentials, and a fair share of it with a CDA, associate's or bachelor's degree.
- Your experience counts. Every year in the field moves you up the scale.
- Family child care starts 10% higher, because you run a business as well as teach.
- No new costs for parents and no interference with your union contract.

Why now

- New York is expanding free and low-cost care. If providers aren't paid, the expansion is built on our backs.
- Family child care capacity fell 28% since 2019. We can't afford to lose more of us.

Real providers, real raises
