

PAY OUR PROVIDERS

FOR PARENTS AND FAMILIES

The people who care for our kids deserve a raise, and it shouldn't cost families a cent.

Your child's provider teaches, feeds, comforts and keeps your child safe so you can work. But child care educators in New York earn less than 96% of the state's workers. When they can't make ends meet, they leave, and classrooms close. Parents and providers are standing together to win two things in the 2027 state budget.

$1.8B

A wage scale for child care workers

Fair pay for every provider, in centers and in homes, paid for by the State without raising what families pay.

$1.2B

Child care assistance for every eligible family

Fully fund CCAP, the program that helps families pay for care, so no eligible family is turned away or put on a waitlist.

Why it matters to your family

- 57% of New York programs are short-staffed, leaving more than 16,000 children without a spot.
- 766 classrooms in centers and afterschool programs were fully closed for lack of staff. Well-paid providers stay.
- Child care already costs New York families about $14,600 a year per child. Raises must come from the State, not from you.

Waiting for help

- In May 2026, 31 counties and New York City had stopped enrolling eligible families in child care assistance because the money ran out.
- NYC's waitlist reached about 30,000 children. Organizing by providers and parents got 10,000 off it this fall. Thousands are still waiting.

Stand with your provider

- Bring the kids to the launch party on Wed, Dec 2 from 11 AM to 1 PM in Albany, Buffalo or NYC: games, music and cake for Shirley Chisholm's birthday. Register at popny.org/dec2.
- Call your state legislators and ask them to fund the wage scale and CCAP.
- Share your story: what would losing your child care mean for your family?
